Direction (Q.No. 36 – 40) : Read the given passage carefully and answer the questions that follow them.

A short puff of wind extinguished the candle I was carrying. Laying it carefully down at my feet, so that I could easily find it again in the dark, I quickly went through my pockets to see if I still had the box of matches which I had thoughtfully put there that morning, when I set out to explore the cave. But a thorough search revealed nothing with which to relight the candle and left me desperately trying to recall how the matches could have gone astray. I then remembered that half an hour before, I had taken a short rest and eaten a bar of chocolate. While doing so, I had rested the candle on a convenient rock in order to leave my hands free to unwrap the chocolate, and just as now, a breath of wind had made the candle flicker and finally go out. It was then that I had used my matches and I could only suppose that I had thoughtlessly left the box on the rock where the candle had been standing. I reckoned that I must be about half a mile from the entrance and that the only thing I could do was to grope my way again. About an hour later, bruised from frequent collisions with projecting rocks, I stumbled into the daylight. The first thing I thought of was a cigarette. Instinctively, I drew out my lighter from my trousers' pocket. It was only when I had it in my hand that I realised what a fool I had been.

Direction (Q.No. 46 – 50) : Read the given passage carefully and answer the questions that follow them.

Euthanasia or mercy killing is the term applied to the painless killing of those suffering from an unbearable pain and an illness for which there is no cure. Advocates of euthanasia have urged that morality and wisdom consist not in the pursuit of life, but in the pursuit of a quality of life, and conversely, it may be desirable to end a life which is irreparably blasted by a dreadful disease or degradation. Indeed the champions of euthanasia go to the length of questioning the very basis of the moral theory which holds that life is always good, death is always evil and its dubious inference that deliberate killing of an innocent human life is always wrong and impermissible. The contrary point of view is expressed by the anti-quality-of-life advocates in diversity of philosophies and moral positions ranging from the view that euthanasia is intrinsically evil and a direct violation of God's supreme dominion over His creatures, to the view that euthanasia is almost wrongful because sentience or even painful experience is preferable to a permanent state of non-existence. A more plausible objection of the anti-euthanasia protagonists is that if euthanasia is permitted it would lead to a general decline in respect for life. The practice of euthanasia may be easily misused.

46. Advocates of euthanasia opine that
(a) a life, which is being destroyed by a dreadful disease, should end
(b) it is immoral to end life in that way
(c) it may be easily misused

(a) the capability for perceiving or feeling
(b) consciousness without involving thought
(c) irreparably destroyed
(d) both (a) and (b)
49. Possible consequence of Euthanasia if permitted could be
(a) General decline in the respect for life
(b) It may be dangerously misused
(c) God's supreme dominion over creatures be celebrated
(d) Both (a) and (b)
50. Antonym of the word 'plausible' is
(a) conceivable (b) improbable (c) cogent (d) sound
